There are so many problems that they cannot be solved yet. There is no point in wasting time on something that has no purpose or benefit. This concept can be seen in the context of volunteering during teenage years, where research has shown that it leads to improved grades and increased self-confidence. Such as improved grades and increased self-confidence are two major positive effects of volunteering during one's teenage years. These effects aren't just short-term but have been proved to affect a teen's well-being in the years to come. There is no sense in criticizing someone who has made a conscious effort to volunteer, as it may not lead to any positive change. Similarly, there is no point getting impatient with someone who is still learning and growing from their experiences. There is no use in trying to help someone who has already found their own path and is confident in their abilities. However, complaining about the situation or circumstances that led to this outcome won't make a difference.
